INTRODUCTION

- ✓ Data analytics is a rapidly evolving field with newer and more advanced tools emerging, which allow much more complex analysis than conventional tools such as Microsoft Excel™
 - ✓ We at SciTech Patent Art (SPA) believe that application of these complex analytical techniques to competitive / market analyses performed by R&D/Technology communities in corporations will lead to unique insights
 - ✓ With recent addition of advanced data analytics capability at SPA, as a pilot, we decided to explore the application of conventional trend analytics and other advanced data analytics techniques such as network/cluster analysis to Mintel's GNPD™ data to extract unique insights
 - ✓ To keep the report concise while demonstrating capability, we have only presented a few findings. If you are interested in learning more or conducting similar analyses on different data-sets, we would love to hear from you: info@patent-art.com

OBJECTIVE & METHODOLOGY

OBJECTIVE	To understand the emerging ingredient/claim trends in Pet food products launched during the last one year across all geographies using traditional and advanced data analytics
METHODOLOGY	DATA SOURCE: <ul style="list-style-type: none">Mintel GNPD™ : Claims and Ingredients information is taken directly from the product package as they appear on the Mintel website DATA: <ul style="list-style-type: none">Products introduced in Pet Food area for the period Sep 2017 – Sep 2018 ~ 2,900+ products with 1,900+ ingredientsNormalized ingredients, company names, claims and product variants to identify trends ANALYTICS: <ul style="list-style-type: none">Trend analysis was conducted on the overall data-set of 2,900+ productsFor advanced data analytics – outliers, inliers, clusters and network analysis - a sub-set of 750+ products introduced in the last 4 months was used
LIMITATIONS / DISCLAIMER	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Analyses in this report are limited to ingredients/claims within the time period studied. Similar analytics can be conducted using packaging, price and other information available in Mintel GNPD™ dataIn-depth insights can be extracted by running specific analyses on ingredient types or claims or companies or geographies.
